

My sister was in your office today and said I should apply. So I am applying. BAM.

Let's get the money thing out of the way. I prefer the barter system, but will accept prepaid credit cards, fiat currency, etc...My journey to the office would be about an hour each way, really chews into the day but what can you do. My cat would hate me if we moved again. I will refuse any and all compensation if I did not effectively add value to any project I am a part of. I speak more in the common tongue than I do in tech bullshit tongue.

Oh, I have a first generation black Macbook that is dying. A replacement would be sufficient as a sign on bonus. Maybe a lease on a Prius as well, but we will negotiate, I hate demands and really embrace the i in humanity.

My resume-

Nothing short of amazing. Potentially the most epic collection of words you would ever see on your screen so I will focus on relevancy. This is probably the tightest and most succinct CV you will ever encounter.

2004-2007

worked with Lyle Owerko

as Minion In Charge of Ops.

We were at McGarry Bowen
www.mcgarrybowen.com
for a run working on Brahma Beer campaign and Cruzan Rum pitch and then a bunch of political BS played out so I wandered off into the sunset on St. Pattys Day with Lyle. Without that shift the Boombox project wouldn't have materialized and obviously you wouldn't be receiving this epic resume.

Since leaving NYC I muddled around for a few months in PA before coming down to Greensboro.

I had an NC Brokers license for a few years and realized I didn't enjoy taxing the population at the rate of 6% per transaction.

I did complete the project below. It took several years but I feel it was worth it. "The Girl with a Pig" that purchased the house seems extremely excited although I think she was foolish for financing 99.5% of the home and not putting any money down.

I have a degree from SUNY- New Paltz in Comm. (Radio & TV Production) from mid 2000's. I often forget the exact year. I took out a bunch of student loans that I just paid off when I sold above house. They were used for my internship in Argentina (I didn't do much of anything but run around Buenos Aires) and went to a Bachelor Party in Vegas.

Life balancing-

I like old things. Power tools and stuff.

I live about an hour from Winston. Wages are flexible, although I do prefer the barter system.

Thanks for reading.
